

Technical Perspectives on Analyst's Rating Changes

AIG - case study
10-19-2008

AIG – The TPARC report for February 12, 2008 called attention to the “breakout below a major congestion” and that the stock was performing poorly. The stock subsequently dropped from the mid-forties to almost $2 per share. This company developed such serious problems that a federal bailout was required. It is instructive to note that the analyst downgraded the stock but his rating stopped at “equal-weight” not “sell.”
